

COURSE DIRECTOR

Rupert Skilbeck, Open Society Justice Initiative, London, UK

FACULTY

Betsy Apple, Open Society Justice Initiative, New York, USA;

Laura Bingham, Open Society Justice Initiative, New York, USA;

Simon Cox, Open Society Justice Initiative, London, UK;

Christian Devos, Open Society Justice Initiative, London, UK;

James Goldston, Open Society Justice Initiative, New York, USA;

Jonathan Horowitz, Open Society Justice Initiative, New York, USA;

Marion Isobel, Open Society Justice Initiative, London, UK;

Maxwell Kadiri, Open Society Initiative for West Africa, Abuja, Nigeria;

Steve Kostas, Open Society Justice Initiative, London, UK;

Mercedes Melon, Open Society Justice Initiative, London, UK.

BRIEF COURSE DESCRIPTION

Human rights litigation is one of the methods by which civil society organizations can bring about social change. This course for human rights professionals will develop the skills and knowledge needed to successfully bring cases to the regional human rights systems and the UN Treaty bodies, and to use those cases to achieve practical change. Participants will be invited to provide information on concrete cases that they are involved in which will be discussed during the course.

The course encourages participants to approach human rights litigation strategically, viewing litigating a human rights case as one step in the process of achieving social change. It includes modules that examine the steps involved in strategic litigation, such as case selection, client care, and forum choice. It also uses case studies to explore how to build a strong evidential record in support of the case, how to develop campaigning and advocacy to raise awareness of the issues involved, and how to implement a successful judgment.

A faculty of human rights practitioners from the Open Society Justice Initiative will be joined by visiting experts, creating a wide body of expertise. Workshops will focus on key skills such as advocacy in support of litigation, legal drafting, communications and media, and dealing with the ethical problems that arise in human rights cases. Modules in specific subject areas will allow participants to examine key issues in their field, including discrimination, economic and social rights, violations in the context of migration, rights upon arrest, and torture and ill-treatment in detention.

For further academic information on the course and on eligibility criteria and funding options please visit the web site at:

<https://summeruniversity.ceu.edu/litigation-2017>

CEU Summer University

✉ P.O. Box: Budapest 5, P.f.: 1082, H-1245

☎ (36 1) 327 3811, facebook.com/cen.summer

E-mail: summeru@ceu.edu

Non-discrimination policy statement

Central European University does not discriminate on the basis of – including, but not limited to – race, color, national and ethnic origin, religion, gender or sexual orientation in administering its educational policies, admissions policies, scholarship and loan programs, and athletic and other school-administered programs.