

CEU Summer course on THE HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY OF THE CONCEPTS OF SCIENTIFIC LAW AND PROBABILITY 6 July - 17 July 2020 – Budapest, Hungary

This course is co-funded by the John Templeton Foundation.

Application deadline
14 February 2020

The purpose of the course is to acquaint course participants with recent work on the history and metaphysics of the concept of scientific law and related concepts that are central to the development and understanding of science. These concepts are important to philosophical accounts of both science and to metaphysics. While there has been a great deal of active research on writing on the metaphysics of laws and also on the history of the concept of laws there has been little interaction between researchers involved in each project. Such interaction will greatly enhance work on both projects. One of the goals of the summer course is to initiate and encourage such interaction.

The first week of the summer school will concern the history and metaphysics of the concept of laws and the second will concern the history and metaphysics of the concept of probability and how objective probability is connected to laws.
